6) operating said document processing software to create a display that displays at least part of said regenerated document.

22. The system of claim 21, wherein said document processing software is spreadsheet processing software and said documents are spreadsheet documents.

23. The system of claim 21, wherein said spreadsheet processing software is selected from the group of Lotus 1-2-3, Microsoft Excel and Borland Quattro Pro.

24. The system of claim 21, wherein said document processing software is word processing software and said documents are word processing documents.

25. The system of claim 24, wherein said word processing software is selected from the group of Microsoft Word, WordPerfect and Lotus Ami Pro.

26. A system for displaying the differences between two versions of a document each having a display format, comprising:

means for selecting a first and a second version of a document; and means for formatting and displaying said first version of a document comprised of a plurality of display fields with a first of said display fields displaying said document data in a first format where said document data is the same in said second version as in said first version and with a second of said display fields displaying document data in a modified format where said document data is different in said second version than in said first version.

27. The system of claim 26, wherein said modified format is user-selectable from the group of bolding, font selection or color.

28. The system of claim 27, additional comprising a configuration file for storing data corresponding to said user-selectable modified format.

29. The system of claim 26, additionally comprising delta-formatting means for storing and fetching said first and second versions.

*   *   *   *   *